Herring Scarce.

The herring season, which is now well under way at the head of the Monument river, Buzzard's Bay, does not promise to be very successful, and the residents are beginning to believe that the industry will never again be as prosperous as in years past. Cold weather is said to be the cause of the small catch thus far, although there are many who consider that the location of the house where the fish are taken has something to do with it. They say that the fish spawn in the small ponds between the river and the great herring pond and then return down the river to the waters of the bay.
